

FARM DAIRY AND HOUSEHOLD.

Introduction of the Brahma Fowls.

In the year 1847, a Hartford man, a Mr. Chamberlain, saw, on the dock in New York, on board of an East Indian just in from a long voyage, and in possession of a sailor, some fowls. They were clearly of the Asiatic family, but different from the Shanghaes, Chittagongs, Cochins, Chinas, with which he was familiar. So he bought them, and took them home. His business, however, interfered with his bringing them before the public, so he parted with them to Mr. Virgil Cornish, then of Hartford, subsequently of New Britain, who propagated them successfully until he had a fine stock. They were not brought out until 1852, at a great poultry show in Boston, where they received the name Brahma Pootra, because they had come from a port near the mouth of a river of that name. They were highly appreciated at once, on account of their great beauty, fine form and large size. They helped greatly to boom the so-called "hen fever," which has been prevalent, and was beginning to flag. One of their distinguishing peculiarities is the triple comb—a central comb rather low set, and a small comb on each side of it, and becoming one with it above the base. Somewhat similar combs had been noticed occasionally in other breeds of Asiatic fowls, and the Malays had a clumsy, irregular triple comb, which had been called a "pea comb," for what reason it is rather hard to tell. The Brahmas all possess the comb described in a small and beautiful form, almost without exception, and this is called pea comb from its triple form. They exhibited from the very first that peculiar through-bred look which marks thoroughly well bred, pure blooded animals of all kinds—American Agriculturist for October.

The Poultry Yard in Autumn.

Mistake is made sometimes by poultry fanciers, and those in the business as well, in placing too many eggs under a hen for her brooding. No larger number than nine can be set with perfect safety, in the autumn; and therefore, if it be desirable to bring out many chickens, the act of the managing two or more sitting hens at once should be acquired. In such case the fancier or breeder can put two broods together, and being careful about the night shelter, there need be no difficulty in accommodating so many broods as shall number twenty to fifty chickens to the attention of a single hen, particularly if the weather of the season be reasonably mild and settled.

Late chicks should be cared for by their mother until a few weeks old, when they can be placed together in a well-sized box, the open sides of which are covered by coarse wire netting. The floor of the box should be well-covered with fresh soil, and have a simple-made brooder at one end, for the little things to run under at night. Give the box a place in the kitchen for the chicken to get under your feet, nor can rats or cats disturb them; set box and contents out in the sun when it shines warmly; change soil frequently, feed and watch brood carefully. In this way it will be not difficult to raise all successfully.

Do not keep to many old hens. Select reliable sitters and mothers, as many as are needed for that purpose. Dispose of the rest, and keep early hatched spring pullets to lay in fall and winter.

For keeping brooding hens cleanly, invest in a good bunch of tobacco leaves; put a few leaves under the sitting hens, and scatter them around the fowl house; tie some bunches on the sides also, and there will be no trouble from vermin.—American Agriculturist for October.

This goose story we give for what it is worth: "The annual consumption of feathers in America for bedding purposes amounts to 3,000,000 pounds. To furnish this 3,000,000 healthy geese must give up their feathers in a year. The geese furnishing these are to be found mainly in Southern Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky."

Puffed Eggs—Beat until very light one dozen eggs, season and drop a spoonful at a time in hot lard; serve at once.

Potato Rolls—Add to twelve mashed potatoes, salt, butter and a cup of milk and two eggs; make into rolls, cover with flour and fry brown in butter.

Beet Salad—One pint each of raw cabbage and boiled beets; chop fine and add one quarter of a teaspoon of grated horse radish and one teaspoon of salt; cover with cold vinegar.

Beef Loaf—Two pounds of raw, lean beef, one cup of rolled crackers, half teaspoonful of salt, two eggs; chop all together, form into a long loaf, cover the top with small pieces of butter and bake one hour.

Beef Soup—Boil until tender a joint of beef weighing four pounds; take it out and put in one pint of white beans that have stood several hours in cold water; when the beans are boiled to pieces add the meat finely chopped and salt and pepper.

Velvet Cream—Flavor and sweeten three pints of cream, add the whites of six eggs and half a box of gelatine dissolved in a cup of hot water; stir till smooth; line a mould with small pieces of sponge cake, then pour on the mixture and set away to harden.

Method in Housekeeping.—In the well-regulated, etc., each day has its appropriate duties. Monday and Tuesday are, of course, sacred to washing and ironing. Wednesday is given to the finishing of the kitchen and the pantries. Thursday the silver must be polished, windows wiped off, etc. Friday, by general consent, is sweeping day, and Saturday is devoted to baking, cake-making, and preparations for the Sabbath. Where all this is thoroughly understood, the household machinery will move with comparative little friction.

Preserving Eggs.—The very best method for the housekeeper to preserve a small number of dozens of eggs for home use or for market, is to simply pack them on end in salt. Salt enough must be used so that eggs will not touch each other or the bottom or sides of the package. The grade of salt used is that known as "coarse fine." Common table salt is, of course, just as good but it costs a little more. It is not necessary to grease, varnish or do anything to the egg (except wash them if they need it), before packing them in the salt; and the pack age should not be turned. Leaving the cost of the salt out of the question, this method is just as good for packing any number of dozens for market.—Prairie Farmer.

Making sugar from sorghum cane is now claimed to be as simple and sure as making flour from wheat. It is only necessary to build mills in farming regions where sorghum cane grows well and ripens early enough to escape September frosts. Nothing seems now necessary except to duplicate the sort of machinery and employ the process used at Ft. Scott—and to grow the cane to supply the mills. The demand for good home grown sugar can be imagined when it is stated that the crude saccharine imported from Cuba and elsewhere costs this country considerable over $80,000,000 a year, and on which the people pay a tariff tax of $52,000,000. It takes nearly all the wheat this country exports to pay for the sugar and molasses imported. This country will never be fairly independent of other countries in supplying its wants until it produces its own sweetening and has some "taffy" to spare for others.—Wichita, (Kans.), Eagle.

If our bad unspoken thoughts are registered against us and are written in the awful account, will not the good thoughts unspoken, the love and tenderness, the pity, beauty, charity, which passed through the breast and caused the heart to throb with silent good, find a remembrance, too?

Oh Yes.

J. G. Jamison is headquarters for all popular medicines and your special attention is called to the most popular family medicine of the day, Holland Cough Cure. It is a never failing remedy for all Throat and Lung trouble. Where once used you will have no other. It is pleasant to take. Children cry for it. Price 50 cents.

The greatest misfortune of all is not to be able to bear misfortune.

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an incurable Consumption. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made." Jessie Middlewart, Deaturer Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, I would have died of Lung Troubles. Was given by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free at J. G. Jamison's Drug Store.

Great possessions may bring great misfortune. Some men are punished by prosperity.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well." Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25.

There is nothing so valuable and yet so cheap as civility; you can almost buy land with it.
